THE SEBEL KIRKTON PARK HUNTER VALLEY, NSW

No-one does tailored luxury like Sydney interior designer Greg Natale, who totally transformed this 70-room hotel in the heart of the Hunter Valley last July. "Of all the hotel options in the area, there seemed to be a lack of an intimate, luxury offering that had all the amenities of a big hotel, yet gave the feeling of something much more personal and sophisticated," says Greg. Blue, black and white, as well as metallic accents feature throughout the hotel, setting a polished yet relaxed tone. Romantic moments of Art Deco magic can also be found in the golden curves of coffee tables, occasional chairs and statement pendant lighting.

WE LOVE Greg used "a fabulous mélange of pattern" to create a kind of visual texture in the guest rooms, and it's how he layers mixed materials that's deserving of a mini masterclass. The carpet is formal in feel, while the spotted wallpaper has a more relaxed vibe about it: together they strike just the right note.

"We wanted to ensure guests felt they were spending their evening in a private country property. We looked to homes and how they differ from hotels, and what it was in stunning residences that we could introduce to this hotel"

~ Greg Natale, interior designer
